Moss Supports Defactionalization

The decade of the sixties brought immense change to our campus. The consequence was more student demands in academic, financial, and student life areas. As the quality of the student increases, I feel that his scope of responsibility increases; therefore, he is more capable of handling these obligations.

One of the major issues confronting our campus today is factions which can mean death to any student government association. Therefore, defactionalization must be achieved as we move forward to a new year. Everyone has his own views which, as can be expected, conflict with others at times, but in order to achieve our goals as students we must all work in harmony.

Moreover, the student is the consumer of the college's product—education. Therefore, he should have a voice in the formulation of policies affecting his education.

Moynihan Calls For Quality Politics

Nancy Moynihan

It is my personal belief that the future role of the President of the College Government Association is not one of dominance or authority, but a position of support and guidance to the student government and the student body as a whole. Throughout its history Georgia College has been an institution of tradition distinguished by grace and quietness. Within a year it has undergone a profound transformation, an inevitable readjustment predestined by the rule of social flux. How further changes are to be administered should be the focal point in any consideration of our college government's future. We must unite to evaluate the past and plan the future, and we must also enlist the support and opinions of all students. It seems to me that throughout the transformation that has taken place, the students involved in the governmental structure of our college have neglected the student body's opinion as a whole. The population of this campus is the students and it is their task to recognize needed changes and improvements and bring them about; but student wishes and opinion must be recognized and accepted by the governing body at Georgia College and these opinions must be used as tools of change.

Student government is not merely a constitution, a code of laws, or a student senate. It is an idea, an attitude, a sense of intellectual perspective. It is not a law, a rule, or a pattern. It is a living, working force, the driving factor in a sense of unity and communication, and each member of the college community must be allowed to take part. This is my

Walton Campaigns For Student Power

Lew Walton

The American university campus might possibly be viewed today as a battleground with a multiplicity of warring interests. The young and the old, black militants and white activists, administrators and intellectuals are all involved in this contention for power. Why, in effect, should there be such a vicious struggle, oftentimes begetting only chaos and confusion, in an institution supposedly devoted to calm, dispassionate search for truth and in an institution supposedly established as the intellectual base for action in our society? In a few words, it seems that the root of the present problems lies in the university or college's lack of the proper commitment to its students. For too long, our colleges and universities have forsaken the ideals of intellectualism and freedom for other goals and aspirations. For now at least, I have heard little which points the correct pathway in education except in the ominous warnings and reproachful criticism of the young and those professional academics who speak with the young.

On our own campus at Georgia College we behold certain faculty, administrators, and alumni (ae), who look askance at students who demonstrate for these causes, who ask for simple rights, who ask for a simple recognition of their own intellectual maturity. Further, we view a faculty which will only sheepishly mention the rights it deserves as a part of what should be a dynamic academic community. Here we confront certain faculty and certain members of the administration who do not systematically encourage students—really away from home for the first time—to question and re-evaluate all

"Firebugs" On Stage Tonight, Friday

On February 18, 19, and 20, 1970 there will be a presentation of Max Frisch's FIREBUGS. The play starts at 8:00 and is free for both students and faculty. Tickets may be picked up in the S.U. or at the door. Any one not affiliated with the school will be able to purchase a ticket for $1.00 at the door.

The play, judging from the practices is extremely entertaining. It can be viewed from either a solely entertaining angle or it can cause the viewer to pause and think about his situation. As Frisch said, "It's a learning play without a lesson." You can laugh at the funny caricatures

Phi Beta Lambda Elects Officers

By Jerry R. Sapp

Phi Beta Lambda met Tuesday, February 10, 1970, for a brief business meeting. The main order of business was the election of new officers. Jerry R. Sapp was elected President; Brenda Lewis, Vice-President; Angela Cook, Secretary; and Tony Armstrong, treasurer. After the election Dr. Joe Specht and Mr. Gordon made a brief talk. After a discussion of future organizational activities, the meeting adjourned, and Dr. Specht and Mr. Long treated everyone present to cokes in the Student Union. The next meeting of Phi Beta Lambda will be held on March 9 at a location to be announced at a later date. Mr. John D. Sewell of the Small Business Administration will be the guest speaker at this meeting. All members are urged to attend this meeting to hear Mr. Sewell speak, and also to ask any questions about the Small Business Administration that they might have.

Construction On Student Center To Begin Soon

Amerson Construction Company of Macon will begin to set up shop on the campus of Georgia College at Milledgeville by February 16 to prepare for construction of GC's new college Union Building. The structure is to be completed in 15 months.

Amerson won the contract for the project with a low bid of $1,459,000. Amerson Executive Vice-President C. Warren Selby, on the college campus recently to talk with President J. Whitney Bunting and other officials, said the first actual construction will take place around the first of March.

The building, with 42,600 square feet of assignable floor space, will serve a variety of functions. It will contain student and faculty dining areas, a student lounge, study rooms, hobby rooms, offices for student organizations and publications, a large bookstore and the campus post office.

made on people or, if you're prone to, you can think about whatever "hidden" meaning you find and wonder why you laughed during the play.

If you're wondering what's going on, you'll just have to go see the play for yourself to understand why there is such a variety of feelings given off from just one play. See you there!

Dr. Lipscomb Enjoys Georgia College

by Dodi Williams

Dr. Harriet Lipscomb, of the Biology Department, is originally from Greenville, South Carolina. She earned a BS from Furman University, where as an undergraduate, she worked as lab assistant for Mr. Daniel. After receiving her M.S. in Forest Pathology from Clemson, she rose to even greater heights and earned her Ph.D. in botany from the U. of North Carolina. Her specialty was anatomy and morphology of higher plants, and she minored in microbiology.

Georgia College is her first teaching assignment, and Dr. Lipscomb says that she likes it here. She serves as Day Student Advisor, with Mr. Ralph Hemphill, as Agape advisor, has worked with the Tennis Club, and is working with the Flower Power Committee.

She is vitally interested in the students, and said, when asked whether she considered Georgia College students "apathetic" (a word she dislikes) "No, students here aren't this way. I've been very pleased with the student involvement and student concern I've seen while I've been here." "There is something for every student on this campus," she went on. "If a student wants to find himself here, he can. The thing I despise is the negative attitude." But she refuses to pretend that there are no faults at G.C. "What I think is most wrong with this campus is communications." When asked about her special interests, she replied that what she likes to do, second best is play tennis or practice jogging. She described one of her greatest moments as the time last summer when the faculty won the student-faculty softball game in which she was pitching.

Dynamically concerned with the progress of the academic world, she says she is overjoyed by the promise of an extension to Herty Hall, and also about the program for undergraduate research being offered by the Biology Department for summer. She is the co-director of this program.

At present, she is kept busy teaching microbiology and doing private research. She's involved in an exchange program with U.N.C. of regional plants for the department's herbarium. She is the author of sections of a forthcoming book on Southeastern Flora.

She added at the end of the interview that she is also the teacher of a junior-high age Sunday School class at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

Jimmy Corbett Sings At Das Kaffee Haus

das Kaffee Haus presents Jimmy Corbett and Friends Saturday night, February 21. Although Jimmy has appeared many times at das Kaffee Haus, this is the first time he has appeared with a group to accent his performance. Everyone is invited to come. There is no admission charge and Cokes coffee, hot chocolate, and chips are available.

Friday night is a "bring your own entertainment" night. Anyone who can sing, play, or put money in the jukebox is welcome to come and make music for his friends.

Grant For Historical Study Made

Milledgeville's The Old Capital Historical Society shared in the latest listing of grants by the National Trust for Historic Preservation in Washington, D.C. A total of $16,300 in awards to 19 historical group or associations in the United States were made during a meeting held in Washington on January 7.

The proposal prepared in Milledgeville under the direction of the Old Capital Historical Society and developed under the leadership of Edgar Jackson and Dr. J.C. Bonner calls for a depth study of historic homes and buildings in the old area of the City of Milledgeville.

Some $1200 has been designated by the National Trust to be matched locally and to pay the cost of expert consultants in the field. As a result of this study it may be possible to have parts of Milledgeville declared a national historic shrine and thus preserved for the future.

Jackson said the grant provides Milledgeville with a new impetus to save and preserve many historic landmarks.

"Those that we have in Milledgeville are envied throughout the nation," he said, "and we should be proud to take any steps to maintain and preserve them. If this study is to get under way in June of this year we shall hope that the citizens of our city will cooperate to provide the matching funds necessary."

specialized in the performance of choral and instrumental music from the Middle Ages, Renaissance, and Baroque periods, using such instruments as the recorder, cromorne, sackbut, cornetto and harpsichord.

Dr. Allen B. Skei, faculty advisor for Fine Arts Week at GC, said all of the activities will be free of charge and open to the public.

Joe South

The world-renowned Joe South (famous for Games People Play, Walk a Mile in My Shoes, Don't It Make You Wanna Go Home, and many more) will perform at the Milledgeville National Guard Armory Saturday night, Feb. 21, from 8 till 12. Also performing will be the Believers and Freedom Suite. Admission is $4.00.

Senate Grants Head Candidacy

Tuesday night the Senate met at 8:00 in Parks 201, with twenty-three Senators present. Senator Donna Fulford presented Private Senate Bill No. Four, to allow Hoylene Head to run for the female Co-Chairman of Honor Council. After a second by Senator Chipper Messer, the candidacy was granted unanimously. The Senate then adjourned.

Flower Power Is Growing Again

Flower Power, the campus-wide project for beautification, is once again underway. Committees from each group represented are now making their plans for summer flower beds.

The chairmen of each group are listed below. If interested in working on the project you should contact this person.

Vandalism! Destruction! No matter what word you classify it under, people have been using and abusing the articles in the REC Lounge. Have you been in the lounge lately? Well, maybe you should! Upon entering the lounge you will notice bottles, cups, and ashtrays overflowing with cigarette butts. Further observation will lead to a broken pool stick, a missing bumper pool ball, and the contents of several REC scrapbooks scattered over the floor and tables. Yes, it's a disgrace. The REC Lounge and its contents are for the GC student body, but look what has happened so far! If things aren't corrected, and soon, the lounge will be locked, and opened only for the REC meetings on Monday night.

Take care of REC property, it may be yours, BUT it is NOT yours to DESTROY!!

We Need Petitions For The "Unqualified"

Georgia College will soon hold the first CGA Presidential Election under the new governmental system. Though the leaders elected last year perhaps did not realize, upon taking office, exactly what the awe-inspiring job that lay before them actually was, they have nonetheless done a noteworthy job of perpetuating the change from one governmental system to another, more democratic one. Much worthy legislation has been passed by the Senate, such as the Women's Curfew Law and the Elections Code, and more will be considered and hopefully passed in the future; for example, the Declaration of Student Rights.

Another piece of legislation that the Editorial Board believes to be in need of immediate consideration is the Constitutional amendment necessary to allow students who are unqualified to run for an office to present a petition to the Senate asking for candidacy. We realize that the Senators were probably under the impression, as we were, that private petitions had been provided for forever; however, the Faculty Committee on Student Relations amended the Code to read that private bills may be presented in preparation for this election only, and for no future elections. Why not? We believe that no student should be denied candidacy for such reasons as the lack of the proper number of hours in this institution, or length of time spent in the Senate or on the Spectrum staff or what-have-you. Denial of candidacy to these people may not only rob that student of the office he believes he is capable of running, but it may also rob the student body of much capable and responsible leadership. The Editorial Board would therefore suggest that the necessary amendment be made in the interest of every Georgia College student, present and future.

Campus In The Round

Reflections On A Tarnished I

I've written some of this before, but somehow what has been written before never sounded quite right. Maybe somewhere along the way I lost sight of the reasons for learning. Perhaps I became the product of a system that spoon fed me information and evaluated the effort by how well I was able to regurgitate it back on a test paper. Lately I've heard the sound of a different drum beat. A sound like "An educator's responsibility is to inspire a student to pursue and appropriate truth." Now if I am fortunate enough to be exposed to such a teacher do I not have a responsibility to myself? Do I continue to seek neat, simple, little formulas, extracts if you will, devoid of all the flavor and coloration of the full knowledge limited only by my capacity for insight and perception? Do I simply acquire enough information to ultimately receive a degree, my passport to a career? Or do I seek to understand, (what a curiously mis-used word that is), how something came to be; what were the events that influenced its being; and what does it mean to me in light of my present experience? I have a curious feeling of dissatisfaction with what I have. Gleaning meager gists, acquiring bits and pieces here and there, now fills me with a sense of loss.

How I wish I could start all over-start at page one and read stubbornly and persistently until I understand. And when I understand, to try to understand what it is that I understand. Then perhaps I could come to know, not what I have, but what I am.

REC Editorial

Don't Like It? Do Something About It!

Several weeks ago I was sitting in the T.V. room in Wells wondering what sort of activities REC could offer the students that they would attend and enjoy. I could come up with nothing. These past 3 quarters that I've been President of the Recreation Association, we've offered many activities—some were successful, others weren't. It was then I decided to do a survey on REC's past activities.

these people come to me with new suggestions. Has this college become bogged down like other campuses? Are we as apathetic as everyone says? I sincerely hope not. I still believe in the individual's worth, but at times this belief is shaky.

I'm writing this article as an appeal to YOU—the individual. What do YOU like? What forms of entertainment do you enjoy? What would you like to see in the future—as far as REC is concerned?

Below is a suggestion form. Will you take the time and initiative to fill it out? Only YOU know that. If you don't like what REC is doing—do something about it—don't be apathetic and sit around complaining.

Take the time right NOW to fill out this form and return it to the box in front of the Post Office. That is, if YOU aren't too busy.

Jackson Calls For Participation In Senate

Susan Jackson
CGA Vice-Presidential Candidate

The College Government Association of Georgia College underwent a vast change when you, the students, adopted the new constitution last spring. Since that time it has been my privilege to view and to participate in the workings of this new system as a student senator. From this vantage point as an "involved observer" I have come to the conclusion that the overall results have been better and more practical form of government. However, to refuse to see the flaws would be foolish. I have seen excitement over the "newness" of the system dwindle and participation steadily decrease. Concerning the Senate, in particular, there has been little utilization on the part of the students of their Senators as spokesmen or representatives. Further, I have noticed the general attitude that the Senate is for Senators alone and those who are not directly connected with its operation take little or no interest in it at all. Allowing students other than Senators themselves to address the Senate without suspension of the rules during specified times may be one possible solution to this problem.

There are numerous other problems to have to be solved and improvements to be made, and it is my hope that the next administration of CGA can provide the solution. As your Vice-President I would work closely with the President and, particularly, the Senate to make these improvements and provide an even more functional government in the future.

Walker Encourages Better Representation

Through my experience I have found that any student government has only two powers: the power to represent students as best as it can and the power to organize itself. Once a leader is reconciled to that assumption, he knows how to use his position most effectively.

Those in administrative positions are paid to responsibly perform duties which necessarily require their assertion of more power over the College than any other group. Only a fool would argue against student involvement in making decisions which affect them. But administrators would not be doing a responsible job if they gave up their responsibilities to students.

A student government then should be representative of the students it supports. We now have better representation in Student Senate. Even so problems are still readily apparent, in the area of Communication especially. If students will consult their representatives, and vice-versa, student government will be more representative and students will be better understood and better informed.

Jeffrey Walker
CGA Vice-Presidential Candidate

I believe it is the Senate President's duty to see that the students are fairly and effectively represented and that Senate business is conducted efficiently.

Head "Concerned About People"

Hoylene Head
Candidate for Female Co-Chairman of Honor Council

In the past year our campus has seen many changes. We students have much more freedom and self-responsibility than ever before. Just as laws are made in the best interest of everyone and to be obeyed, so too are rules made. When a rule is broken this infringes upon the rights of others.

Honor Council is set up for this purpose, to determine what should be done when a major rule is broken. It is now a court for prosecution—it is a peer group concerned about people. I, as Co-Chairman, have neither the desire nor the intention of being a prosecutor or judge, but rather someone who stands up for the rules and those who abide by them.

I am well qualified for the position of Co-Chairman, as I have served on Honor Council for two years and am quite familiar with its functions. Co-Chairman is not an easy position, and I am ready to accept this challenge and responsibility.

Floyd Recognizes Importance Of Office

Hello, I'm Cynthia Floyd, a mathematics major from Brunswick, Georgia, and in the upcoming elections I'm running for the female Co-Chairman of your Student Honor Council. Since I don't feel it's worthwhile to make any outlandish promises as to what I'd do if I were elected; all I can say is that I would do my best to fulfill the responsibilities of such an important office. You, as a student at Georgia College must decide who you feel is best qualified for each office. So that you'll be able to come to a decision, I'll tell you about my experience in the area of college government. While a freshman, I served as Chairman of Floor Leaders for Bell Dorm and obtained practical experience in hearing minor cases that came before House Council. This year I am one of two juniors who are representing my class on Student Honor Council. Also I am sitting in on Bell House Council meetings as a representative from Honor Council. Well, I've made an effort to show my concern for our college government by running for an office, and now I urge you to make an effort and for the candidate of your choice.

Cynthia Floyd
Candidate for Female Co-Chairman of Honor Council

Messer Qualifies By Experience

Stanley Wayne Messer (Chipper) is from Wilmington, North Carolina and is presently a Junior at Georgia College. He is a Health, Physical Education and Recreation major and he is minoring in Biology. He hopes to teach on the secondary level in Asheville, North Carolina upon graduation in the spring of 1971.

Chipper is a graduate of Gordon Military College. He received his Associates in Arts Degree during the spring of 1969. Coming to Georgia College in the fall of this year, Chipper was elected Vice-President and senator from Beeson Dormitory. He is currently serving as President of his dorm and participating in various committee functions within the newly formed Senate.

He is seeking the office of male co-chairman of Honor Council in the elections of winter Quarter.

Stanley "Chipper" Messer
Candidate for Male Co-Chairman of Honor Council

Wells Won't Outdate Honor

Bobby Wells
Candidate for Male Co-Chairman of Honor Council

During the past year change has been the key word at Georgia College. Consolidation of the Judiciary and the Honor Council has been the major change in the Judiciary Branch of our College Government Association. However, this change hasn't affected the basic framework of our honor system—that of honor resting upon the individual student. Moreover, the strength of our Honor System depends directly upon each student's acceptance of responsibility.

Although there is a question of whether or not our Honor System is obsolete, I personally feel honor can not be outdated, for it is the means through college government by which we may govern ourselves. Our Honor System at Georgia College can remain strong as a result of each student taking the initiative to uphold it.

Ellington Will Refuse Oppression

Pat Ellington
Candidate for Editor-In-Chief of The Colonnade

As acting editor of the Colonnade for the past four weeks, I have had the opportunity to know the feeling of responsibility and hard work that is involved in such a position. Though the editorship is a very demanding office, the rewards make the headaches worthwhile. As the editor of the Colonnade for the next year I will attempt to (1) improve the newspaper in the area of content, layout, organization, and advertising and (2) to encourage and stimulate student interest in the fields of staff members and avid readers.

Also, I firmly believe that freedom of expression is a must in a student newspaper and will never allow the content of the Colonnade to be oppressed by faculty administration, or faction ideas. The Colonnade will be a student newspaper, expressing student opinion and any editorializing will be censored only by the editor.

Any college newspaper can only be as good as its college, readers, staff, and editor. I will do my part to make the Colonnade a great newspaper—but I cannot do this alone.

that they have been taught in home, church, and school, in an effort to engender some sort of individualistic inquiry. All of these points are not to condemn our faculty or administration, many of whom are fine scholars and do their job well, but merely to point up their shortcomings in just such a way as we would do our own parents. There is then a need for reform at Georgia College, for new commitments, for a reordering of priorities toward the goals of intellectualism, individualism, and true democracy.

Lately, so much of the impetus for change at Georgia College, for a new commitment to an old direction, has come from the students. There have been noticeable improvements in the ideas and the outlook of certain persons. The CGA of today is immensely more democratic and student-based than before. We have gone so far recently, but there is yet so much more to be done. So much, in fact, that a catalogue of problems and issues would be too lengthy for this writing. Yet, though the need for action exists, I have found that students usually do things only in spite of themselves—just passing our courses is often a full time job. All I can do with assurance is explain that an enhancement of student power at Georgia College will mean enlightenment and academic progress; it will mean a more democratic standard of governance and regulation; it will encourage students to think and decide for themselves; it will show us the advantages of freedom and power; and it will teach us how they are most responsibly and wisely utilized.

It is, then, on this program of student power and its resulting reforms under sound leadership that I pledge my campaign for President of College Government Association.

platform, if you must call it that; actually it is a belief and a desire on my part for the future of CGA.

Expansion in student government brings to Georgia College many new areas of campus life never before explored. Politics on campus is the most obvious of these at this time. Campuses everywhere are plagued by political unrest, ours is hanging in the balance. We can join the masses in confusion and separatism, or we can establish an example of quality politics. We must have the latter of these alternatives and I believe we are on our way to this. In order to remain on this course we must coordinate our efforts and consider such issues as students' rights, drug abuse, campus communication, finance, social rules, relations between students, faculty, and administrations, and the right of students to display their initiative and see direct results.

TUESDAY
FEB. 24, 1970

A DECLARATION OF STUDENT RIGHTS: GA. COLLEGE

(Editorial Note: Following is the proposed Declaration of Student Right which will be presented at the Senate meeting next Tuesday night. The rights and freedoms expressed in this declaration are those that we, the Editorial Board, feel are fundamental to each college student's growth and development, and therefore, we endorse this piece of legislation.)

PREAMBLE

As an academic institution the college exists for the transmission of knowledge, the pursuit of truth, the development of the individual and the general well-being of humanity. The College does not exist for the purpose of imposing any set of beliefs, concepts, ideals, morals or any pattern of behavior whatsoever upon any individual or group of individuals. As members of the academic community students should be encouraged to engage in their own sustained and independent search for truth. The freedom to teach, to learn, and to mutually transmit ideas are inseparable facets of academic freedom. With rights and freedoms of others.

As an integral part of the academic community students have a responsibility to share in the establishment of policy and should assist the faculty and administration in giving direction and purpose to the institution. Therefore in a spirit of cooperation and brotherhood and with the general well-being and freedom of all as our purpose, we do hereby submit this declaration.

ARTICLE I

Freedom of Access to Higher Education

No student shall be denied admission to Georgia College for reason of race, creed, color or sex. There should be a concerted effort by the college to recruit those students who have previously been denied access to higher education for reasons other than academic, so as to serve equally all the citizens of the State of Georgia.

The expectations of Georgia College toward any prospective student shall be made clear in the catalogue of the college. No requirement may be placed on any student for reason of race or sex. All students shall have equal access to the facilities of the college. The college should encourage the local community to grant students equal access to all public community facilities.

ARTICLE II

Freedom of Expression

In order to achieve the goals of an institution of higher education and of a dynamic academic community an atmosphere conducive to free inquiry and expression should be maintained at all times:

(1) In the classroom, Free discussion in the classroom should be encouraged so long as it is orderly and relevant. Disagreement with stated opinion or with given subject matter is to be allowed and should not prejudice the judgement of the students' work. Such judgement should be made only on the basis of academic performance and should not be prejudiced by a student's opinions, political affiliations, race, creed, or color. The student is responsible for learning and the subject matter given in class.

(2) On campus,

The administration should not in any manner hinder the free expression of opinion on the college campus. Such expression may be public or private, direct or indirect and made through any campus organization or group. Students are to be free to support any cause so long as that support is orderly and non-violent. Organizations may invite any speaker without hindrance or censorship and the administration should be concerned only with scheduling and the provision of facilities.

(3) In student publications, Whenever possible a student publication should be legally and financially independent. Such publications as are financially supported by the college should be open to all student opinion. No student publication shall be censored in any manner and there shall be no requirement for reading of copy by members of faculty or administration prior to publication. Editors and managers should be provided with protection against suspension and administrative disapproval of content. The same agency responsible for appointment of editors and managers shall be responsible for their removal. The staff of each publication shall be individually responsible for violation of any civil code.

ARTICLE III

Freedom of Association

Students should have the right to organize and associate. Membership in any organization should be restricted to members of the college community. No organization should be denied institutional recognition on the basis of its affiliations with extramural organizations.

An organization should be free to choose advisors who will have no direct control of organizational policy. Recognition should not be withheld from any organization unable to obtain an advisor. No membership list should be required for recognition. Only the name of the functioning secretary should be required for recognition.

Membership to any organization cannot be denied on the basis of race, creed, sex or national origin.

ARTICLE IV

Individual Freedoms

The college should not make any attempt to regulate individual moral conduct of the students. The college's authority should not include the personal and private lives of the students. The student alone is responsible for his moral conduct. There should be no differentiation in regulations of male and female students.

A. Freedom of Private Room
A student's room should be treated as his private residence at all times.
1. There should be no search or inspection of the premises or possessions of the students without a civil search warrant. If possible, the student should be present.
2. No student should be held responsible for damage to school property unless he is given due process and proven guilty. A dorm resident should not be automatically charged for damage to the dorm if not individually proven guilty.
B. Access to Rights of

1. A student should be free to exercise all his rights of citizenship, as free speech, peaceful assembly, right to petition, etc., as a citizen of the United States, and no such freedom should be impaired by the college.

2. A violation of law should not be prosecuted by the school, but by civil authorities. No violation of law should ever be duplicated by the college. The school's only cause for intervention in legal cases should be to advise students of sources of legal counsel. If college regulations, as class attendance, are violated during off-campus activities, only the normal penalty should be given; any prosecuted civil violation should not be considered when the campus sentence is passed.

3. The college should at all times act independently of community pressure.

ARTICLE V

Right of Participation in Policy Making

As members of, and therefore an integral part of, a dynamic academic community, the students should share fully in the establishment of institutional policy within the community. They should possess an equal voice with faculty and administration on all matters concerning the academic community as a whole as well as all matters of direct concern to the students themselves. Therefore, student representation on all policy making committees and boards should be equal to that of faculty and administration of the college. The final authority of the choice of these student representative rests with the students or with elected members of the student government.

ARTICLE VI

Right to Private Records

Concerning the private records or files of the students of Georgia College:

In a student's records there should be no mention of his personal religious beliefs or political affiliations, inasmuch as said information may be prejudicial toward a student whether or not it is intended for this purpose.

No record of violation of United States or state law should be kept. This is the duty of state and federal agencies and not the duty of the college. When disciplinary records of campus misconduct are placed on file, they should be separate from academic records and be placed in a separate filing system. Only administrators should have access to disciplinary records; this excludes faculty, other students, parents, or anyone else within or without the college community. The students should be free to see any of his records at any time. If the student gives written consent to anyone else, they may see the disciplinary record. The only exception to this should be legal compulsion or safety of persons or property.

All disciplinary records should be destroyed at the time of each student's graduation or the time at which he leaves the school. Academic records should have the same regulations, with only administration and faculty being able to see records without the student's permission.

Administration and faculty should at all times practice discretion regarding the information they acquire in the course of their duties, be it classroom or counseling. It should be their professional duty to regard all information, as personal beliefs, political affiliation, and ideas on the school policy, as confidential.

ARTICLE VII

The Right of Procedural Fairness

All students shall be guaranteed equal treatment in disciplinary matters. The college shall guarantee all students a semblance of due process of law in that: a student will be informed of those charges placed against him prior to any hearing or trial; a student will be informed of the names of those who have instigated charges and/or testified against him; a student will have the opportunity to refute charges at all hearings and trials; and all punishable offenses shall be clearly defined and published prior to their implementation.

The status of a student may not be changed because of the outcome of any case of public law, except when such case directly involves the safety of the students, faculty, administration or college property and no action whatsoever may be taken in regards to said student until such time as he has been found guilty by a court of law. The administration shall have no authority to override the verdict of any student court except when such verdict is appealed by the defendant.

Spring Sports Schedule Is Out

Athletic Director Floyd V. Anderson of Georgia College has announced the spring schedule for the Colonials' teams in baseball, golf and tennis.

This will mark the second season for the spring teams, intercollegiate athletics having been inaugurated at Georgia College in the fall of 1968.

The baseball squad, coached by M. Allen McNamee, will play a twenty-game schedule, beginning with a March 21 home double-header against Augusta College. Also to be played at home are the next three games on the schedule—March 24 against Georgia State University, March 28, Newberry, and April 1, Malone College.

A three-game road trip will find the baseball Colonials at Newberry on April 2, at Atlanta Baptist April 4 for two games, and at Mercer University April 9.

After an April 14 home encounter with Georgia Southwestern, the Colonials go back on the road to face Georgia State for two on April 18 and Augusta College for a single game on April 21.

April 25 will find the GC nine at home again to play Shorter. The cross-town rivalry with Georgia Military College will be reviewed on April 28 in the season's only night game.

A return engagement with Shorter will be played in Rome May 2 and a home game against Mercer is set for May 7. The season will close at home May 9 as the Colonials entertain Atlanta Baptist College in a double-header.

Home baseball games will be played on Milledgeville's newly enlarged Bonner Park diamond.

The varsity golf team, coached by Ronald Luke, will play 13 matches this year. On the slate are home events with Oxford College of Emory University March 31, Berry College April 3, Middle Georgia College April 17, Shorter College April 24, Augusta College May 1, and Mercer May 7.

Out-of-town matches will see the Colonials play against Georgia Southern April 14, Augusta College April 21, Valdosta State April 27, Middle Georgia May 5, and Oxford

College May 12.

Two three-way matches are also scheduled for the Colonial golfers with Mercer and Valdosta State April 7 in Macon and one against Berry and Shorter April 10 in Rome.

Coach Lavonne Taylor's women's tennis team faces a ten-match spring schedule, beginning March 30 with a home contest with Macon Junior College.

Other matches on the card include Georgia Southern April 4 on the GC courts; Oglethorpe April 6 at GC; the University of Georgia at GC on April 15; DeKalb College in Atlanta April 18; Macon Junior on April 21 in Macon.

The University of Georgia April 24 in Athens; DeKalb College April 29 in Milledgeville; Oglethorpe in Atlanta May 1 and Georgia Southern in Statesboro May 6.

The Colonials' men's tennis squad will open the season March 28 with a home match against West Georgia College. On April 4, it will be Atlanta Baptist in Atlanta; April 14, Georgia Southwestern at GC; on April 21, Augusta College in Augusta and on April 25, a home match with Shorter College.

May 1 will see the Colonials visit Georgia Southwestern, and May 2 will find them in Rome to play Shorter.

A road match with Mercer is set for May 4 and at a return bout on the Georgia College courts is set for May 7.

Augusta College will visit on May 8 and the Colonials entertain Atlanta Baptist May 9 to close their season.

Coaching the men's tennis team will be Larsen Z. Bosserman.

Farr's Pony Is No Longer Nameless

The ten-month-old filly belonging to Mr. Farr was named this past Saturday, with the selection of the entry sent in by Nancy Hooper. From many submitted entries, the name "Easy Going" was chosen. As the winner, Nancy will receive a relaxing ride on the horse of her choice at "The Corral."

Mr. Farr expects six more colts to be born soon, and will be looking for names for them too. If you have any ideas, stop by the Corral and talk to Mr. Farr.

The last act—absolutely NO ADMITTANCE will be allowed during this time.

Moynihan -- Politics

I am not basing the above statements on specific solutions that I might have in mind. I feel that these are the important issues that need immediate attention, but they must be tackled by the students and their representatives through established channels. Radical drives for the sake of progress many times produce unwieldy situations which eventually lead to total immobility. Basing an administration on these beliefs, I simply offer to you my support before the faculty and administration, a working knowledge of the College Government Association, and a desire to make the College Government Association a more meaningful and integral part of our college life.

GC Gymnasts Breeze By SC

The women's gymnastics team at Georgia College at Milledgeville posted its third win of the season Saturday, beating the University of South Carolina. The Lady Colonials have suffered two losses thus far in the season.

The final score in the meet was Georgia College 46.95, USC 39. GC took first, second and third in the balance beam competition, two seconds on the uneven parallel bars, second and third in vaulting, and first and third in floor exercise.

Outstanding performers include Wyline Spradley, who placed second in vaulting and uneven parallel bars; Sheila Wood, first in balance beam; Tina Potts, first in floor exercise and third in balance beam; Ellen Hicks third in floor exercise; and Pat Moynihan, tied for second on the uneven parallel bars.

The meet will be held in the gymnasium of the Health, Physical Education and Recreation Building.

Next for the GC gymnastics squad will be a three way meet Saturday at 2 p.m. in Milledgeville, with the University of Florida and Auburn University bringing in the opposition.

If you don't vote, Don't gripe.

Exhibition Match Coming

TENNIS ANYONE?! Yes, it's that time again! The courts are being used more and more, and the tennis teams have already begun practicing. As an added attraction this year there will be an exhibition match on campus. The match will be between Donni Andrews, the tennis pro at the Hilton Head Tennis Center in Hilton Head, South Carolina, and Robbie Smith, the tennis director for the City of Macon. The match will be held on February 23 at 3:00 p.m. Everyone is encouraged to come out and watch, for it promises to be a very good contest.

Talmadge Warns Audience Of Economic Slowdown

Georgia Senator Herman E. Talmadge told a Georgia Day audience at Georgia College last week that the United States may face its worst economic set back since World War II unless something is done quickly to halt inflation and excessive interest rates.

Talmadge spoke at the First Annual Georgia Day Dinner, co-sponsored by Georgia College, the Milledgeville and Baldwin County Chamber of Commerce, and several Milledgeville civic groups.

The Senator pointed to the tight money market, declining housing starts, corporate earnings and retail sales, and rising unemployment as reasons for his belief that we are witnessing an economic slowdown that is "becoming quite serious."

Talmadge pinpointed what he called "three major inflationary engines" federal budget deficits, unnecessary corporate expansion, and collective bargaining laws that allow labor unions to "demand and receive any wage they desire."

The current session of Congress, Talmadge said, is facing up to two of these three problem areas by balancing the budget and repealing the seven percent investment tax credit for corporations.

He said he does not believe that any changes will be made in current collective bargaining laws, though he singled out organized labor's demands for higher wages as one of the major factors in the inflationary spiral of the last five years.

Talmadge also touched on the problem of poverty, reaffirming his belief that vocational education with the involvement of private enterprise offers the greatest promise of rehabilitating many now on the welfare rolls.

Legislator To Address Peabody PTA

Georgia House Majority Whip Charles M. Jones of Hinesville will be in Milledgeville February 24 to address a meeting of the Peabody Laboratory School Parent-Teachers Association. The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the school auditorium.

Jones is scheduled to talk on "Contemporary Educational Issues: A Legislative Viewpoint."

First elected to the Georgia House in 1960, Jones has been re-elected five times by his constituents in Liberty and McIntosh counties.

He has served as Majority Whip since 1967 and is a member of the important standing committees on Rules, Appropriations, and Banks and Banking.

Jones is a graduate of the University of Georgia Law School and has been a practicing attorney since 1959.

Peabody Director Robert I. Candler said interested parents and school officials from Milledgeville and Baldwin County are being invited to join Peabody parents and teachers at the meeting.

Face In The Crowd

Steve Estes is a senior majoring in Business Administration, with a concentration in management. From Macon, Georgia, he is a graduate of Lanier High School. His extracurricular activities include membership in Phi Beta Lambda, and he also serves as the President of the GC Circle K Club. In his spare time, he derives enjoyment from playing golf and chess, and also spends many hours listening to music.
